Think All High Schools Are The Same? Think Again.

HOUSTON, TEXAS—The Post Oak School will hold an Admission Open House at its High School on Wednesday, April 10, 2013 from 7:00 to 8:30 p.m. The open house provides a chance for prospective students and their parents to see this innovative learning environment, hear first-hand from current students, and learn about the unique curriculum designed to develop entrepreneurial skills, while at the same time cultivating one's interests. The presentation also covers the International Baccalaureate (IB) Program, described as “a rigorous, off-the-shelf curriculum recognized by universities around the world” in a Time magazine feature on education.

At Post Oak High School, students take academics beyond the classroom and apply their learning in the real world through connections with partner institutions such as the Houston Museum of Natural Science (HMNS), The Houston Zoo, and the Museum of Fine Arts, Houston. Students have already taken advantage of these partnerships through projects such as observation and data collection in the paleontology hall of HMNS and lectures by doctors from the nearby Baylor College of Medicine and MD Anderson.

The High School is the latest division of the 50-year-old Post Oak School. It was created to meet the specific need of today's teenagers to pursue their interests while cultivating skills such as problem solving, innovation, and critical thinking—qualities not often fostered by conventional education. Post Oak is preparation for college and for life. Students with a strong sense of self-direction are encouraged to apply for one of the remaining openings.
